HOW IS INNISFREE DIFFERENT?

--Students and staff sharing talents to establish a learning-teaching situation. "You haven't learned something until you can teach it."

--Optimum conditions for experiencing self-directed responsibility with help in confronting the "What shall I do?" problem.

--Lack of an imposed schedule; however a 1:5 staff to student ratio allows for close attention to all participants.

--Completely democratic community--one person--one vote.

--Group discussions of academic and personal nature aimed at better understanding of self and others.

--Special small group or individual instruction upon request.

--Accredited tutoring for remedial work.

INNISFREE is not an experiment in escapism.

INNISFREE is an experience in personal responsibility within an environment which allows for
